Since the age of 3 I have started to learn how to use a computer and since then I have never stopped learning. I have learned a lot of different programming languages, currently I am studying computer science. When I am not programming, I love to play games (hacking). I love computers and they need to love me back. I can help you with your problems. My favorite programers and companies are: Microsoft, Teamviewer, Activkeys, Pop-Tronics, Kaspersky, MS Office, AVG, Pixl and others. When I am not programming or playing games I am often doing something else! Like chilling on the sofa. Q: Why does my page's actual time show the timezone different to the user's timezone? I have a page that is being used to print labels using the printer driver that ships with a printer (Datamark CS-280). I have used the following code to print the date in UK time: Public Function LabelDate(ByVal Label As String, ByVal Date As Date) Dim d As Date Dim st As Date LabelDate = Label & Format(Date, "dd/MM/yyyy HH:nn") & " GMT" st = DateSerial(Date, Year(Date), Month(Date), Day(Date)) d = DateSerial(st) LabelDate = d.ToString("yyyyMMdd")

LabelDate.ToString() End Function This code will work fine if the timezone of the browser that is calling the page is set to London time, or any timezone based on the date that the page was called.

However, when a user has a timezone different to the regional timezone on their computer, the date that is shown on the page gets printed with the timezone of their regional time, rather than GMT. For example, say a user is in the US but is calling the site when UK time is in effect. The date that is printed out will show the date in the timezone of the US, even though it is actually showing UK time. Is there a way to print the date to timezone of the user, rather than regional time?
