Xforce 32-Bit & 64-Bit.In the previous two tutorial videos, we saw how to install digitalOcean vdroplets using their Ubuntu 14.04 Server ISO installer. We'll now update those VMs using an ISO of Ubuntu 16.04 LTS. You can use the same ISO that we used in the previous two tutorials, located here: Before we update a VM, there's one more thing we need to do. The Windows PowerShell has a new `Add-ImageRepository` cmdlet that will allow us to add Ubuntu 16.04 LTS images to our profile. This will ensure that our `Download-DockerImage` script will be able to find those images on the Internet. To add this new repository, open the PowerShell window as an Administrator, and run the following command: PowerShell .Add-ImageRepository -Login $ConsoleLogin -Type Ubuntu -Server $ConsoleServer -MirrorURI "rg.linuxserver.com/16.04/ubuntu/dists/" -Force Your browser does not support the video tag. To update the VM, you'll need to find the hostname of your VM (anything starting with digital-server in this case), open a new PowerShell window as an Administrator, and run the following command:
PowerShell
